

Enescu Concert piece for viola and piano:

This viola piece by Enescu is one of his most outstanding works. As a master of Romanian music, Enescu perfectly combined the exuberant colors of Romanian folk music with the deep emotions of post-Romanticism. The piece not only showcases the lyrical and mellow nature of the viola, but also is filled with highly challenging and magnificent techniques. It is hailed as a highly expressive treasure in the literature of the viola.

Prokofiev: Romeo and Juliet for viola and piano

The piece "Romeo and Juliet" is derived from Shakespeare's classic tragedy. It uses music to tell the passionate yet doomed love story between Romeo and Juliet. The original version of this piece was a suite composed by Prokofiev for the piano, and later it was transformed into a version for the viola.

Its core lies in the confrontation and interweaving of two kinds of sounds: the tender and beautiful melody: representing the adoration and intimacy between lovers. The intense and tense conflict: representing the obstruction of the feud between two families and the mercilessness of fate.

The rich and slightly raspy tone of the viola perfectly interprets the depth of emotion, the contradiction and the sense of destiny in this story.
